

Seattle Solidarity Network

a talk on community direct-action casework

Seattle Solidarity Network (SeaSol) is a workers' and tenants' mutual aid group that you can join to fight back against bosses and landlords when they do something like steal your wages or your damage deposit. By supporting each other through collective direct action, and winning these small fights we build our strength, experience and confidence, we can take on bigger opponents and take back more from the bosses – and we start to realize that we can do far more than that – we can create a new world.

Join a member of SeaSol in a workshop and discussion about why we believe that building solidarity networks or doing similar small-scale organizing in every city is one initial step towards building a movement of resistance based around people's daily experiences and fighting back against the rich and powerful.

Wednesday 17th August from 7-9pm

The Factory, 2-8 Cave Street, St Pauls, BS2 8RU
